Area Median Income, commonly referred to as "AMI," is a federal calculation based on census data for each demographic area; the annual calculations above are not set by the City & County of Denver but are set federally. Regarding affordable housing, a household paying more than 30% of its gross monthly income for housing is generally considered to be cost-burdened. For example, a one-person household earning 70% AMI is considered cost-burdened if monthly housing costs are higher than $1,260.

Affordable Housing 101

Your guide to the most common types of
affordable housing

A safe, affordable place to live is essential. While affordable means something different to everyone, there may be a number of options when it comes to keeping a roof over your head. Depending on your income, age, disability status, credit file, rental history, and background check, you may qualify for different affordable housing options. To help, make sense of these options, read on...

Understanding Where You Fit In

To understand what kind of housing best meets your needs, it is important to know what your "affordable rent ratio" is for a rough sketch of how much you can afford for rent. Your affordable rent ratio is 30% of your gross (before taxes and deductions) monthly income. For example, if your gross income is $3000 per month, your affordable rent ratio is $1000 per month. If you need more information on calculating your ratio, contact Colorado Housing Connects (844-926-6632) to speak with a rental counselor. If you have trouble determining what options best fit you, Colorado Housing Connects can provide additional information.

Private Market Rentals

If your affordable rent ratio is above or close to "market rate," then you would look for a private market rental. Private market rentals are the most common form of housing. To figure out what "market rate" rent is you can search online or in-print advertisements for rental opportunities in your area. For example, if your affordable rent ratio is $1000 per month and you find apartments between $850 to $1400, you would best fit a private market unit.

Tax Credit Properties

If your affordable rent ratio is somewhat below "market rate," then you may qualify for a tax credit property. Tax credit properties are apartments with slightly lower rent than the private market rentals. Tax Credit properties are meant for individuals and families that make less income than most other people in a specific city but that can still afford some rent. Because tax credit properties are lower in rent, they may have a wait list or no vacancies.

Subsidized Housing

If your affordable rent ratio is significantly below market rate and also below tax credit rent, you may qualify for subsidized housing. In subsidized housing, rent is often 30% of your income (which can sometimes match your affordable rent ratio). There are many guidelines that determine whether you qualify for subsidized housing and how much you would actually pay in rent. Because subsidized housing is the lowest in rent, it almost always has a wait-list. The wait-list can sometimes be anywhere from a couple of months to a few years.

Housing Choice Voucher ("Section 8")

If your affordable rent ratio is significantly below market rate and also below tax credit rent, you may qualify for a housing choice voucher (once called a "Section 8" voucher). Housing vouchers are most commonly issued by a city or county housing authority. A housing voucher is an agreement where a tenant will pay some rent and the government will pay the rest in a private market rental. The voucher can only pay a limited amount, so only certain private market rentals qualify. The tenant often pays 30% of their monthly income, but the exact rent number depends on a lot of different factors. Qualifying for a voucher begins with a pre-application where you enter your name into a city or county lottery. These lotteries are sometimes only open during two days of an entire year, if that. It is very difficult to be selected as many people apply. Some landlords will not accept vouchers and are not legally obligated to.

Home Share Rentals

If your affordable rent ratio is below "market rate" or if you just want a more affordable housing option, then you may want to consider a home share rental. Home share rentals offer a room in someone's house oftentimes for an affordable rate or in exchange for chores to support a senior homeowner. Different home share programs help match prospective tenants and homeowners. Tenants often still need to go through an application process to qualify. Programs can vary in the time it takes for a tenant to match with a homeowner, the services a homeowner may request, or the amount of rent a homeowner may expect.

Manufactured (Mobile) Homes

If your affordable rent ratio is somewhat below "market rate," then you may consider renting a manufactured home (often called a mobile home). Manufactured homes are operated by private market landlords but are often more affordable than a private market apartment rental.

Home Ownership

If your affordable rent ratio is "market rate" or slightly below "market rate," you might consider pursuing home ownership. There are a number of home ownership and down payment assistance programs available to help people achieve home ownership. Qualifying for these programs can depend on your family size, credit background and a number of other variables. To learn more, call Colorado Housing Connects (844-926-6632).

When Your Affordable Options Are Limited

With affordable housing in high demand, your options might be limited. To help you secure an affordable place to live, could you...?

Expand Your Geographic Focus

The more places you can consider moving, the better your chances are that you can find someplace to fit your housing needs. Whether it is a neighboring city or another part of the state, an open mind is the quickest way to an open door.

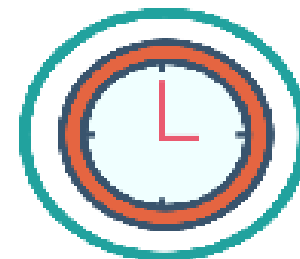

Find A Roommate

While everyone enjoys a sense of independence, identifying someone to split the rent with can improve your chances of finding and keeping a roof over your head. Whether it is a friend, family member, or someone in your community network, a trusted roommate can balance out the burden of rent.

Reduce Your Expenses And/Or Supplement Your Income

Whether it is an extra shift, baby sitting, paid help for a friend, or a public assistance program, a little bit more money can make monthly rent all the easier. Meet with a housing counselor to see how you can reduce your expenses. If you are a senior, consider applying for Old Age Pension through your county human services office. If you have a family, contact your local human services department to see if they have a program fit to support you.

Find A Short Term Fix & Develop A Long Term Plan

Finding an affordable housing solution can take time. Many tenants need to compromise on their short term housing before they find a better solution. For example, even if a home sharing program doesn't give you the privacy that you prefer, it could be a good option while you apply for subsidized housing. A family member with spare space may not be a great long term option but they could help you out while you save money for another place to live.

Tips For Conquering Your Next Housing Search

Start Early

For many Colorado renters, it is a tough market to find a new place to call home. Depending on your resources, it may take a while to find someplace that is "affordable." Know where you stand in the housing market and prepare accordingly. Think in terms of months, not weeks.

Check Your Credit Report

Your landlord is going to check your credit report. Shouldn't you know what's on it? Credit reports sometimes contain errors that might hurt a tenant's rental application. Check your official credit report for free at www.annualcreditreport.com. If you don't understand your credit report, call Colorado Housing Connects to find helpful non-profit resources in your area.

Watch For Scams

Don't submit an application or pay money without first verifying that the rental is legitimate. Some red flags could include out-of-state landlords, requests to pay before doing a walk through, no company website, no public reputation... Ask follow up questions. When a deal is too good to be true, it probably is. If it is a small time landlord, ask the neighbors about the property.

Know If You Qualify

Ask your prospective landlord "what are your tenant selection policies?" or "how do you choose your tenants?" If they are automatically going to deny you because your credit score is too low, don't bother paying the application fee. Do they require 2.5 or 3x more income than the rent? An 'affordable' place to rent is typically considered 30% of your gross monthly income. For more on affordability, call Colorado Housing Connects.

Complete ENTIRE Application

In this competitive market, incorrectly filling out a rental application could automatically disqualify you as a prospective tenant. Don't throw your money down the drain! Take an extra minute to make sure that your application is complete, accurate, and legible.

Stand Out!

Consider including a personable cover letter or "renter resume" with your application to stand out. Landlords want to know that you will be a financially responsible and stable tenant. If you have poor credit, explain what you are doing to improve it. Dress for success. Treat the application process like finding a job. A landlord may take a tenant's general appearance into account...

Example Letter

Dear Lenny the Landlord,

Thank you for the opportunity to view and apply for your rental!
This apartment is the perfect opportunity for my family. It is close to my children's school and along the route I need for work.

I want to take a moment to address the eviction on my record. In 2013, my spouse and I divorced. We were in the middle of our lease and the rent was too high to manage on my own. I tried to work something out with my landlord, but didn't have any luck. It ended up in an eviction and I've been working to get things straightened out ever since.

I've worked at the same place for the last 5 years and things have things gotten much better. Your apartment is something that I can afford as the sole provider and is a good match for my family. I hope that you will look past my eviction as it was a onetime hardship during my divorce. I'm ready to find a home that will be a good fit for my family so we can move on with life.

Sincerely,

Tom Tenant

Letter tips
Keep it brief—a landlord is less likely to read a long letter
Keep it accurate—Don't mislead the landlord, be honest
Explain, don't excuse—Landlords aren't looking for excuses but many understand that things come up. They might be willing to work with you if they know more about your situation

Mastering the Application

HOW RENTERS CAN SUCCEED IN THE APPLICATION PROCESS

Get Organized

Use the form below to help you organize the critical information that many rental applications require. When you are hunting for housing, you want to have all of the essential information in one location. Many applications also require proof of income (ex. recent pay stubs, benefit award letters, bank statements, or tax returns), a photo id, and a payment card for any associated application fees.

Identify If You Qualify

When you do identify a prospective unit, ask the landlord "what is your tenant selection policy?" or "what are your tenant requirements?" You can also ask "is it negotiable?" If a prospective landlord requires a certain credit score, background qualification, or income amount that you don't have, don't bother paying the application fee as you may be disqualified automatically. If it is a good opportunity, fill out the ENTIRE application. Blank or inaccurate information may result in automatic disqualification.

Renters Beware

Don't share your information or pay an application fee, holding deposit, or security deposit before verifying that the rental is legitimate. Is the property managed by a company that has an online reputation? If it is a small time landlord, what do the neighbors have to say about the property? Meeting with the landlord and doing a walk through of the rental before paying is a common practice that can help. If you choose to use this form, don't let it fall into the wrong hands. Like any important documentation, keep it safely guarded both in-person and digitally!

QUESTIONS TO ASK WHEN SEARCHING FOR LOW INCOME HOUSING

ARE YOU ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR LOW INCOME HOUSING?

HOW LONG IS THE WAIT LIST?

HOW MANY APARTMENTS IN THE COMPLEX HAVE THE BDRMS/SIZE THAT I REQUIRE?

WHAT IS THE TYPICAL RENT AMOUNT FOR THE TYPE OF APARTMENT I REQUIRE?

IS THERE AN APPLICATION FEE? HOW MUCH? DO YOU PROVIDE RESULTS AND A RECEIPT, HOW LONG TO GET THE RESULTS?

WHAT IS THE WAITLIST PROCEDURE? SHOULD I CALL BACK REGULARLY?

WHAT DOCUMENTS ARE NEEDED FOR THE APPLICATION?

WHAT IS THE BEST TIME AND PLACE TO FILL OUT AND RETURN APPLICATION?

ARE THERE ANY RESTRICTIONS ON WHO CAN RESIDE IN THE HOUSING? (RENTAL CRITERIA, IE: CAN INDIVIDUALS WITH EVICTIONS/FELONIES/PETS RENT HERE?)

IS THERE A MIN/MAX INCOME REQUIREMENT?

WHO SHOULD I ASK TO SPEAK TO IF I NEED TO GET IN TOUCH WITH SOMEONE AGAIN?

WHAT IS THEIR PHONE NUMBER OR PHONE EXTENSION AND EMAIL?

Less Stress Searching

The housing search process can be stressful. Not only is it important to bring together all of your information to easily submit an application, but it is also critical to log the places you've applied. Some renters need to apply to many places before they succeed in their housing search. Keep track of your search here.

Don't Forget.....

- 1 Make sure you qualify for each rental by asking a landlord about their "tenant screening requirements" or "tenant selection policy"
- 2 Double check each application to make sure it is accurate & complete (incomplete applications may be disqualified)
- 3 Follow up to verify that your application was received, is complete, and that you are eligible for the rental
- 4 Remember to get copies of anything you sign, documents and applications you submit, and receipts for fees paid
- 5 If your application is denied, ask the landlord why you did not qualify for the rental.

Bonus Tip: Affordable Housing Waitlists

If you are applying for affordable housing with a wait list (like a "subsidized" or "tax credit" property) call every other month to ask about your spot on the wait list and to make sure your application is still under consideration.
